From the DAILY ADVERTISER, of February 21, 1767.

To the PRINTER.

A General ſurprize has within theſe few days been occaſioned by a certain memorial, ſaid to be received from one of our colonies, relative to the liberation of the American commerce; this memorial, 'tis ſaid, is fraught with new requeſts to the mother country; and a number of gentlemen, who ſhould know infinitely better, imagine, becauſe the Americans have lately been redreſſed in ſome particulars, that it is extremely preſumptuous to ſolicit a farther removal of grievances; and that becauſe we on this ſide the Atlantic, laſt winter corrected an unfortunate miſtake, 'tis a derogation from our conſequence to give any additional proofs either of juſtice or underſtanding.

Every man of real knowledge, before he pronounces upon matters of importance, will ſeriouſly weigh the cauſe upon which he is to decide, and form his judgment by the ſtandard of unprejudiced reaſon, not by the criterion of popular partiality; on this account, before we condemn, we ought attentively to weigh the nature of its contents; if the Americans are agrieved, is it not natural for them to complain, and is it not proper for us to redreſs? Oh, but we have within a few months redreſſed ſome of their moſt eſſential complaints, What does that ſignify? We are bound in juſtice to remove them all, and they have conſequently a much greater cauſe to be offended at our backwardneſs to indulge them, than we have to be nettled at their requeſt.

When I ſpeak of the American complaints, I by no means intend that we ſhall repeal any law to favour our colonies, if the repeal has a tendency of being injurious to ourſelves, a ſolicitation of that nature from the coloniſts, would be equally bold and rediculous; and deſerve to be treated both with indignation and contempt; the only grievance which I want to have removed from the ſhoulders of the Americans, are ſuch as plunge them into difficulties without doing the mother country the leaſt good; and ſtrip them of that equal claim to protection, which an Engliſhman ſhould enjoy while he ſubmits himſelf to the laws, in every part of the Engliſh dominions; by the fundamental principles of the Britiſh conſtitution, the whole body of the Britiſh ſubjects is entitled to an equal ſhare of juſtice, and the principles of our conſtitution muſt be violated in the tendereſt of all parts, if we inſtitute any laws but, ſuch as are calculated for the general good of the community; partiality always is injuſtice; and we ſhould never impoſe a greater load upon others, than we ourſelves would be ready to bear in a reverſe of ſituation.

That the inhabitants of the North-American colonies are at preſent reſtrained by a number of laws upon their trade, which are not only unattended with advantage to the mother country, but even abſolutely prejudicial to her intereſt, every perſon converſant with commerce muſt immediately admit. Is it criminal, therefore, in the northern colonies to ſolicit a repeal of ſuch laws as plunge them in poverty, and even diſtreſs Great-Britain itſelf? Is it preſumptuous to beg that theſe laws may be ſeriouſly conſidered; or arrogant to point out the dangers which muſt inevitably reſult from continuing them any longer in force? If theſe are crimes, the nature of juſtice muſt be ſtrangely altered in this country, and poſſibly in a few years the plunderer profeſſed, or the rebel on record, may be ſet down as the moſt upright miniſter, or the moſt faithful ſubject to the kingdom.

The vaſt importance of conſulting the good of our colonies was never more apparent than from the beginning of Mr. Granville's adminiſtration, when the chief cauſes of the American murmers unhappily took place; Mr. Granville, I have no doubt acted with a patriotick intention, during his continuance in office; but experience fatally convinced the whole kingdom, that he was no way maſterly as a politician, however reſpectable he might be as a man; before the fatal æra of his influence, the prodigious ſums of money which were conſtantly ſent into this kingdom by the colonies, kept all our manufacturers employed, raiſed the value of lands, and diffuſed a univerſal ſpirit of chearfulneſs over every part of our iſland; but the moment we ſhackled them with coerſive laws, we laid a foundation for our own deſtruction; the Americans no longer in a capacity to purchaſe Britiſh manufactures, began to cultivate the various neceſſary arts among themſelves; and the Engliſh merchant, in a very little time became lamentably unemployed; diſcontent and diſtreſs now appear in every face which was lately flushed with the generous glow of abundance; poverty in its ghaſtly form, ſtalked publickly through our ſtreets, and whole profeſſions grew up as one man, almoſt threatening the auguſt aſſembly of the nation, if they were not inſtantly furniſhed with bread.

Yet notwithſtanding theſe evils apparently reſulted from the reſtraints which we had thrown upon the American commerce, and notwithſtanding we reformed nothing beyond what we were bound to by the ſtricteſt principles of equity, we are become ſtrangely jealous of our American fellow ſubjects; we exult with the appellations of generoſity what is only an act of prudence in ourſelves. I am not willing to find fault, yet if I had an inclination, how infinitely more ſevere could I be on the inhabitants of the mother country, than the mother country can poſſibly be on the poor Americans: The mother country has expended millions of money and oceans of blood, to eſtabliſh her colonies in opulent ſecurity; yet, aſtoniſhing infatuation! the moment the colonies became either opulent or ſecure, that moment the people of Great-Britain endeavoured to counteract the moſt elaborate ſchemes which had been planned by themſelves; the people of England ſquandered their money and their lives to make the Britiſh colonies powerful; of conſequence nothing can be more injudicious than to ſubvert their own intentions; we ſurely could not want colonies to make them either wretched or contemptible; if they ever were worth our conſideration, they are worth our conſideration now; on which accounts, till colonization is conteſtibly proved diſadvantageous to Great-Britain, I muſt be moſt earneſt for the liberation of the American commerce, as nothing elſe can either add ſo efficaciouſly to the intereſt of the colonies, or ſo eſſentially add to the intereſt of England.

WARSAW, DECEMBER 4.

ON the fourth of laſt month the following declaration was preſented to the King by Mr. Wroughton, the Engliſh miniſter.

"His Britannick Majeſty, ever excited by reaſonable deſires of protecting by all methods the Chriſtian proteſtants, eſpecially thoſe, who, by virtue of particular conventions, have a right to expect his aſſiſtance, finds himſelf obliged to repeat his preſſing repreſentations in favour of that oppreſſed part of the Poliſh nation, known by the name of Diſſidents; wherefore the underſigned, in conformity to freſh orders from the King, his moſt gracious ſovereign, has the honour to repreſent to you, Sir, and to the republick of Poland, that his Britannick Majeſty, beſides the many ſolemn motives of juſtice and humanity, which give him reaſon to hope for a happy ſucceſs of the preſent negociations relative to this affair, finding himſelf compelled, by a ſtrict alliance with the courts of Peterſburgh, Berlin, and Copenhagen, to intereſt himſelf in behalf of the Diſſidents in all forms of law, and in quality of guaranty of the treaty of peace of Oliva, wiſhes, that in the preſent diet, this virtuous but unhappy part of the Poliſh ſubjects may be re-eſtabliſhed, as members of the ſtate, in poſſeſſion of their rights and privileges, as well as in the peaceable enjoyment of their mode of worſhip, which every one knows belonged to them before the ſigning of the ſaid treaty of Oliva. At the ſame time his Britannick Majeſty conſiders how great is the connection between the intereſts even of the republick and the juſtice of this affair, as well as the fundamental laws of the kingdom; laws which were not only obſerved for two centuries, but renewed by treaties with the northern powers, ſo ſolemn, that they do not permit the leaſt alteration to be undertaken, unleſs with the general conſent of the contracting parties. For theſe cauſes his Britannick Majeſty, filled with confidence of the equity and penetration of his Poliſh Majeſty, who, from the beginning of his reign, has given ſo many teſtimonies of zeal for the happineſs of mankind, and of love towards the adminiſtration of juſtice in the republick, has not the leaſt doubt that his juſt deſires will no longer be oppoſed by references to inefficacious conſtitutions, eſtabliſhed in the midſt of inteſtine troubles, contradicted by the formal proteſtations and expreſs declarations on the part of foreign powers.

"Although the rights and privileges of the Diſſidents are founded on a doctrine, whoſe principles of charity and benevolence make it characteriſtical of Chriſtianity; and the divinity of its inſtitutor, who firſt preached it, renders it ſtill leſs a matter of doubt, yet it is this religion, of which the exerciſe is diſtributed, and of which its profeſſors are excluded from all honourable employments, and deprived of all means of ſerving their country. Nevertheleſs, their rights and privileges have been confirmed to them by many ordinances of the kingdom, ſettled by ſo many treaties, ſupported on foundations ſo ſacred, and ſo evident to the eyes of all nations, that the underſigned, miniſter of a monarch who preſerves towards the republick the ſincereſt ſentiments of friendſhip, and of inclination to give proofs of them on every occaſion, flatters himſelf that the mediation of the King his maſter will produce the effects, which he may naturally promiſe himſelf: That the wiſdom of the nation aſſembled will afford a remedy to the evils which rend the ſtate, and oppreſs the Diſſidents, and that with regard to things eccleſiaſtical and civil they may be re-eſtabliſhed in the ſituation they were in before the treaty of Oliva. As to the next, the ſincere wiſhes of his Britannic Majeſty for the glory of the King of Poland, and for the proſperity of the republick, are ſo notorious, that it would be uſeleſs to give freſh aſſurances of them. In the mean while, the underſigned cannot avoid reiterating them, as an inconteſtible proof of their reality.

LONDON, MARCH 1.

Extract of a Letter from Geneva, dated January 14.

"The French miniſtry continue to treat us as enemies, and to put their threatenings into execution. I ſend you the copy of a declaration of the Governor of Burgundy.

"Philipe, Antoine, Gabriel, Victor, De la Tour du Pin, Marquis of, &c. and ſo forth.

"In conſequence of his Majeſty's command, it is ordered to all Genevians, who may be at this time within our government, to withdraw, and alſo to go entirely out of his Majeſty's dominions, in the ſpace of fifteen days from the publication of theſe preſents. Thoſe who ſhould be found within the ſaid government and dominions after the aforeſaid time, will be arreſted and kept in priſon till further orders.

"It is forbidden to all his Majeſty's ſubjects, to have the leaſt commerce, direct or indirect, with any Genevians, thoſe who ſhould, ſhall be ſeverely puniſhed.

"It is ordered to the inhabitants of towns and other places, within the province of Burgundy, to declare to the magiſtrates, all kind of proviſions, goods, and generally every thing that may belong to any ſubject of the republic, or may be intended for them, or any of them.

"It is our will, that theſe preſents ſhould be read, publiſhed and poſted, to all accuſtomed and neceſſary places.

"Given at Dijon, December 31, 1766.

"The natives and inhabitants who were in hopes they might have free intercourſe with the French, ſince they have nothing to do in the legiſlature, have found themſelves miſtaken. They can no more travel into France without a paſſport from the French Reſident, than the repreſenting citizens; and this paſſport they cannot obtain unleſs they ſign a declaration, purporting, that they are ſatisfied with the magiſtrates upright adminiſtration, and entirely devoted to them. Thoſe whoſe conſciences will not let them do this, are ranked with them with whom France will have no connections."

The following Letter from our Moſt Gracious Sovereign, to his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, ſhews the Spirit of a great and good King, and an honeſt and upright Miniſtry; and favours not the leaſt of a B——n or Gr——n Adminiſtration.

"Sir, my Brother,

"As a friend and ally of the republick of Geneva, it is impoſſible for me to look with indifference on the diſtreſsful ſituation of a people demanding my protection, not alone as chriſtians, but as proteſtants.

"In the quality of mediator of their differences, you cannot poſſibly have a right to abridge the freedom of a ſtate, which, ſmall as it is, never ſurrendered its liberties; nor can you be juſtified in overturning a conſtitution, whoſe continuance you have ſolemnly guaranteed.

"It behoves me therefore, as a Monarch, and as a Chriſtian, and a Proteſtant (with the ſuffering Genevians) to expect and require of you to relinquiſh a meaſure ſo derogatory to your glory, as that of beſieging and oppreſſing this unhappy republic.

"But in caſe you refuſe to comply with this reaſonable requiſition (which, I truſt, would be an unpardonable inſult on your prudence and humanity to imagine) all Europe muſt witneſs, that you alone will be to blame for the conſequences that may follow.

I am, Sir, your Brother, &c. &c.

Extract of a Letter from Genoa, dated January 15.

The more we reflect on the diſmal and critical ſituation of this republic, the more we are perſuaded that there is but one ſtep to be taken to extricate her out of her ſad condition, which is, that the citizens and burgeſſes ſhould call a general aſſembly, and declare that they are ready to accept the regulation propoſed by the miniſters and plenipotentiaries. If this be not done, it is certain that three mediating powers will not delay putting in execution the guaranty which they have given to the regulation in the year 1738.

The Emperor of Germany is now very buſy in endeavouring to prevent witchcraft and ſorcery, necromancy and jugling. The puniſhments for thoſe who are detected are different in their degrees of ſeverity; ſome are even to be puniſhed with death. [If men and women when they grow old become neareſt allayed to the Devil, and more under his direction, will hanging have power enough to prevent it. To be ſerious, can it be imagined, that in an age ſo enlightened as the preſent age is, that a nation like the Germans ſhould ſtill retain thoſe idle notions of witchcraft, which did indeed infeſt the minds of the people of all nations of antiquity, but have long been diſmiſſed from moſt nations in general in Europe: Notwithſtanding among ſome of the inferior claſſes, thoſe notions are ſtill retained every where, yet the more enlightened underſtandings hold them in deriſion.]

The liberty of the preſs is of ſo much conſequence in Swedeland, that the King of Sweden will ſoon publiſh a new ordinance on that head.

A raſcally pettifoging Attorney has lately been puniſhed with impriſonment in the above kingdom, for daring to engage in a ſuit for which there was no ſupport but falſe pretences againſt natural juſtice. [No nation under the canopy of Heaven ſtands in need of redreſs in ſuch caſes more than England, where ſome examples of puniſhment of the like nature would probably have a wonderful effect.]

Extract of a letter from Edinburgh, dated January 13.

——"A couple have been married here within theſe few days, whoſe adventure makes a great deal of noiſe.—— A gentleman of fortune in London, was in love with a young lady under age, whoſe father would not conſent to their marriage, and it was at length agreed between the parties, that the gentleman's valet de chambre ſhould carry off the young lady in a poſt-chaiſe, which was to be met a few miles out of town by her lover; by ſome accident he miſſed of the poſt-chaiſe, and the young lady, as well as her conductor (who by this time became her moſt ardent lover) thinking it no way adviſable ſhe ſhould return without her errand, ſhe was perſuaded to accept of his hand inſtead of his maſter's. The marriage has been accordingly ſolemnized; but the moſt ſingular part of the hiſtory is, that the young lady's father is likely to be reconciled to the match, as the bridegroom turns out to be a young man of ſome family and good morals."

Among other ſchemes of public œconomy, we hear, a ſtop will be put to the further appointment of yellow Admirals.

A few days since, the following affair happened at an house in Smithfield: An officer in his Majesty's navy made an assignation with a young lady of family and fortune to meet him at this said inn, where, instead of the lady, her father and brother attended, when the latter produced a brace of pistols, and demanded satisfaction of the officer for endeavouring to seduce his sister. The naval hero, to pacify the enraged father and brother, promised marriage, which was performed the next day, to the satisfaction of all parties.

An Hibernian has just opened a publick-house in the neighbourhood of St. Giles's, on the front of which he has written, A good ordinary every Sunday in the week, beef steaks, mutton chops, and other liquors.

We hear that George Grenville will be strongly opposed next general election, in consequence of a patch'd-up address from the Sheriff, &c. of Bucks county, wherein some disrespectful reflections against the colonies was inserted.

Not long since three sharpers made up of the following stratagem to obtain a sum of money from a Tradesman in Rochester: They went to a publick house in the city and sent for him, pretending that they would be customers to him, in the course of conversation however, one of them took occasion to mention an affair that had just happened where he had been, viz. That a person undertook for a trifling wager to repeat the words "there he goes" for the space of a quarter of an hour successively, without moving from his seat, which, easy as it appeared, he could not perform. The unsuspected tradesman caught the bait, and proposed himself to repeat the same words for half an hour. The sharper took him at his word, and ten guineas were immediately staked; whereupon he placed himself facing the dial, but least any tricks should be played therewith, he pulled out his watch (which was a gold one) and placed it on the table before him. Preliminaries now being settled, he proceeded on the performance, but e'er he had made much progress, his opponents swept money and watch off the table and walked out. The Tradesman, supposing this only as a scheme for him to lose the wager, still continued stedfast in repeating only the forementioned words ("there he goes"): The Landlord observing his companions walk out, went to acquaint him with his suspicion; when he entered the room, he found his guest as before discribed (excepting only his want of watch and money) but could not receive no answer from him but "there he goes." Apprehending he was delerious, it was judged requisite to send for some skilful person to assist him; an Apothecary was thereupon provided, who, when he entered, found the tradesman in the forementioned position, and saying, "there he goes." Arguments they found were vain; they therefore were about to proceed to forcible means to attract his attention other ways; but just as they were entering on their intended opperation the time expired, and the Tradesman with an oath declared he had won his wager.

This unexpected change surprised the visitants, and we suppose the visited not less alarmed, when informed of the trick which had been passed on him; and to heighten his vexation, he cannot now shew his face without being insulted by boys with "there he goes."

Yesterday there was a very full House of Commons, and it was expected that they would sit late, the state of an opulent Company being taken into further consideration.

A report still prevails, that some resignations among the Great are soon likely to take place.

An order is sent to Scotland for raising three companies of Highlanders, to recruit Lord Panmure's regiment of Scotch Fuziliers, now stationed in West-Florida, which corps hath suffered greatly by sickness.

They write from Senegambia, that inland caravans were preparing to be established this summer, to penetrate several hundred miles into the country, it being supposed, from the report of the Black Traders, that many valuable mines of gold are to be found therein.

There is now living at a village called Maidford, near Towcheſter, in Northamptonshire, one Mary Wilson, who is in the 117th year of her age, and enjoys her senses in a tolerable degree, and walks well. She used formerly to sell buckles, combs, &c. about the country, but is now supported by the charitable contribution of the parishoners.

It is currently reported, that the Right Hon. the Earl of Chatham, will speedily assume the Office of First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury.

They write from Leghorn, that General Paoli had issued an Edict, prohibiting the Corsicans from hoisting either at Bastia or in any of the Harbours of that Island, Genoese Colours.

They write from Toulon, that an Order had been received from Court, for equipping several Frigates of War and Bombketches, and it was reported, the Object of their Destination was to aid the Genoese, in the intire Reduction of the fortified Sea Ports occupied by the Malecontents, in the Island of Corsica.

They write from Copenhagen, that according to a Calculation formed from the Registers of Deaths and Burials, there have died during the year 1766, in the kingdom of Denmark and Norway, together with the Countrys possessed by his Danish Majesty in Germany, 35,683 Persons, and the Number of their sorn amount to 62,480.

MARCH 21. It is said orders are issued from the War-Office, for five regiments of foot, quartered in the North of England, to march for Portsmouth, to be embarked for America.

Several transport ships in the river taken up in the service of the government, are ordered to sail for Cork in Ireland, to take on board some regiments on their establishment for North-America.

We hear that Orders are sent to the Commissioners at Plymouth, to get three more Ships in Readiness at that Port, as Guard-Ships.

On Tuesday last thirty Transports were taken up by the Government, in order, it is said, to carry Troops to North-America.

INTELLIGENCE EXTRAORDINARY.

WE hear, that the Gentle Shepherd, having severely felt the ill Effects of public Odium, without a full Power to repress Licentiousness, and crush his Enemies, insists on the following Conditions, previous to his Acceptance of Office, viz. That General Warrants, with a full Power to seize Papers, be restored; that the Press be put under the Inspection of Licencers; that an Inquisition be erected, and that the Stamp-act be re-enacted. Lord Gowkee infisting, that his four illustrious, active, and only Friends, Macfoshy, Vamp, Dick Swift, and Humphry Riot, be rewarded for their extraordinary Zeal and Merits, in writing the excellent Paper signed Onuphus. It is said that the celebrated Scot Orator Macfoshy is to be Solicitor, Vamp Tapster, Dick Swift Runner, and Humphry Riot Turnkey to the Inquisition. Jemmy Twitcher and Curry will be continued Informers, and Evidence to the Inquisition. It is proposed, at present, to lay aside Juries, but as a pack'd Jury may sometimes answer the Purpose, and save Appearances, all pack'd Juries will be taken from the Cocoa Tree.

SHERBORNE, Jan. 12. A melancholly affair happened last Tuesday night in the parish of Lelant, Cornwall, and is thus related: A young man of the said parish, a tinner, some time since enlisted himself a soldier, and very lately (his regiment then lying at Plymouth) he obtained a furlough to go home and visit his friends at Lelant; but having tarried too long, took a resolution not to return to his company. However, a part of the regiment being at Penzance, received information of the said deserter, and accordingly the informer, with several soldiers, went to his father's house in the night, and complained of being in great want of light; out of good nature to supply them, he lighted a candle, and gave admittance into the house; no sooner was the door opened, but they all rushed into the house, and immediately a pistol was fired, and murder cried. The family, consisting of the deserter, his father, mother, and brother, took to what weapons they had; the brother was cut down dead on the spot; the father and mother are stabbed in the body with a bayonet in such a manner, that it is thought they cannot recover. After the death of the brother, the deserter fled out of the house at a back-window, naked, ran to a tin mine, and went down to the bottom by the rope. When he came down, the miners at work perceived that his entrails was coming out, and immediately had him taken up, and put to a house. It is thought that this affair will be the death of a whole family, consisting of four persons; but it is hoped, that justice will be executed on the perpetrators.

BOSTON, APRIL 27.

The following is a copy of a letter from his Grace the Duke of Richmond, to the speaker of the late house of representatives.

WHITEHALL, November 27, 1767.

'SIR,

"THE letter you did me the honour to write to me on the 20th of June last, was sent after me to Paris (where I was gone to take my leave of that court) which prevented my receiving, and acknowledging it sooner.

"Permit me now, Sir, to desire you to take the first opportunity of laying before the house of Representatives of the province of Massachusetts Bay, the high sense I have of the honour they have done me, in the vote of thanks which you transmitted to me. Such a mark of approbation of my conduct in relation to the British colonies, is undoubtedly very flattering to me: For although I can claim no other merit than that of heartily concurring in the many and important points that were so carefully attended to, and so determinedly carried through by the last administration; yet it is a great satisfaction to me that I was right in my perswasion that those measures would not only restore tranquility to the colonies, but also produce great benefits to them, and returns of gratitude to the mother country. This compliment to so inconsiderable an assistant in those transactions as myself, is a proof of the disposition of your province to the latter; the first we have already seen to take effect; and I trust from the accounts that are already received, that the advantages arising to America from the acts passed last session of parliament will ever be equal to the good intentions of those who planned them.

"In whatever station I may be in, it will always be my wish to see the prosperity of his Majesty's American dominions rise to the greatest height, both on their account, and because of the advantages that must necessarily result from thence to the mother country.

"I cannot conclude, Sir, without begging of you to except my best thanks for the polite manner in which you communicated to me this vote. I am, Sir, with great esteem, your most obedient, humble servant, RICHMOND."

To Thomas Cushing, Esq; Speaker to the Honourable house of Representatives of his Majesty's province of Massachusetts Bay.

THE publick may depend upon it that the reports wickedly propagated of troops being to be sent to and new taxes laid upon America, are entirely without foundation—That the conduct of this province and our late house of Representatives has been highly approved of by the great ones in parliament, from many of whom letters have been received expressing the same, and their great affection for this people.

The conduct of the late house of assembly in supporting the dignity of Government, and the rights and liberties of this people, as also in counter-working the designs of our inveterate enemies, and representing us with advantage to his Majesty, the ministry and nation, will cause their names to be handed down with honour and gratitude to the latest posterity.

We hear that John Williams, Esq; of this place, now in London, is appointed Receiver-general of his Majesty's customs in North-America.—— 'Tis said Commissioners of the Customs are also shortly to be appointed, to reside in America, and that Charles Paxton, Esq; is nominated as one of them.

The following extract of a letter from Dennys de Berdt, Esq; directed to the Speaker of the late house of Representatives, dated the 14th of February last, which may serve to quiet the minds of many persons that have been lately disturbed with apprehensions of Troops being sent here to keep them in order.

"SIR,

"SINCE my receiving your judicious, pertinent and decent representation of the difficulties your trade laboured under, I have had several conferences with Lord SHELBURNE on the subject of it, who has been so obliging as to desire me to lay the case before him, in form of a memorial, with which his own secretary will attend me to the Board of Trade, and has promised his interest to serve; for which memorial now lies before his Lordship—The restraint laid on the fishery will be removed.

"The goverment are about to call home the troops from America, and place others in their room. The preparing for the embarking of which has occasioned my particular application to Lord SHELBURNE on that head, who was condescending and obliging as to assure me, I might satisfy all my friends that there was no intention of augmenting the forces in America, but a mere exchange."

To the Printer of the SOUTH-CAROLINA GAZETTE, and COUNTRY JOURNAL.

SIR,

YOUR inserting the following Ode, will oblige your constant Reader. A. B.

ODE TO FORTUNE.

BLIND deity, whose votries throng,
Thy altars ev'ry hour;
Will thou a while attend the song,
Of one who mocks thy power.

Who conscious of th' inceſſant toil,
In which thy followers groan;
Nor build his bliſs upon thy ſmile,
Nor tremble at thy frown.

Yet ſince in turn, each mortal bows,
Before thy ſplendid throne;
I likewiſe will preſent my vows,
And boldly aſk a boon.

This only I demand of thee,
To whom e'en monarchs bend;
That thou will leave thy ſervant free,
To works of uſeful end.

Thy courted gifts forbear to pour
Profuſely on my head;
Leſt I forget bright virtue's rules,
By dazling pomp miſled.

Nor wit, nor genius, boaſted power,
Too laviſhly impart;
Nor in fair beauties fading flower,
Enrap my youthful heart.

Yet while I labour to eſcape,
Thoſe gifts that wrap the heart;
Guard me from pun'ry meagre ſhape,
Or pains too piercing dart.

Thy pleaſures moderately give,
With frugal hand, that I,
May neither fondly wiſh to live,
Nor murmuring aſk to die.

Theſe be the gifts I aſk from thee,
If thou thoſe gifts deny;
I bow my ſupplicating knee,
Before a throne more high.

To him from whom thy dread commands,
Receive their mighty force;
And who when leaſt we know the hand,
Directs their fickle courſe.

Oh! may my humble prayer be heard,
While proſtrate at his throne;
I aſk of him a heart prepar'd,
'Gainſt thy ſevereſt frown.

Still may I view with equal eye,
Thy favour or thy hate;
Nor ſhudder if a low'ring ſky,
Portends an adverſe fate.

Ne'r let thy ſun's moſt potent rays,
Relax my ſtrength of mind;
But fortunate or adverſe days,
A like reception find.
